Deep Western Boundary Current and Float Deployment Locations

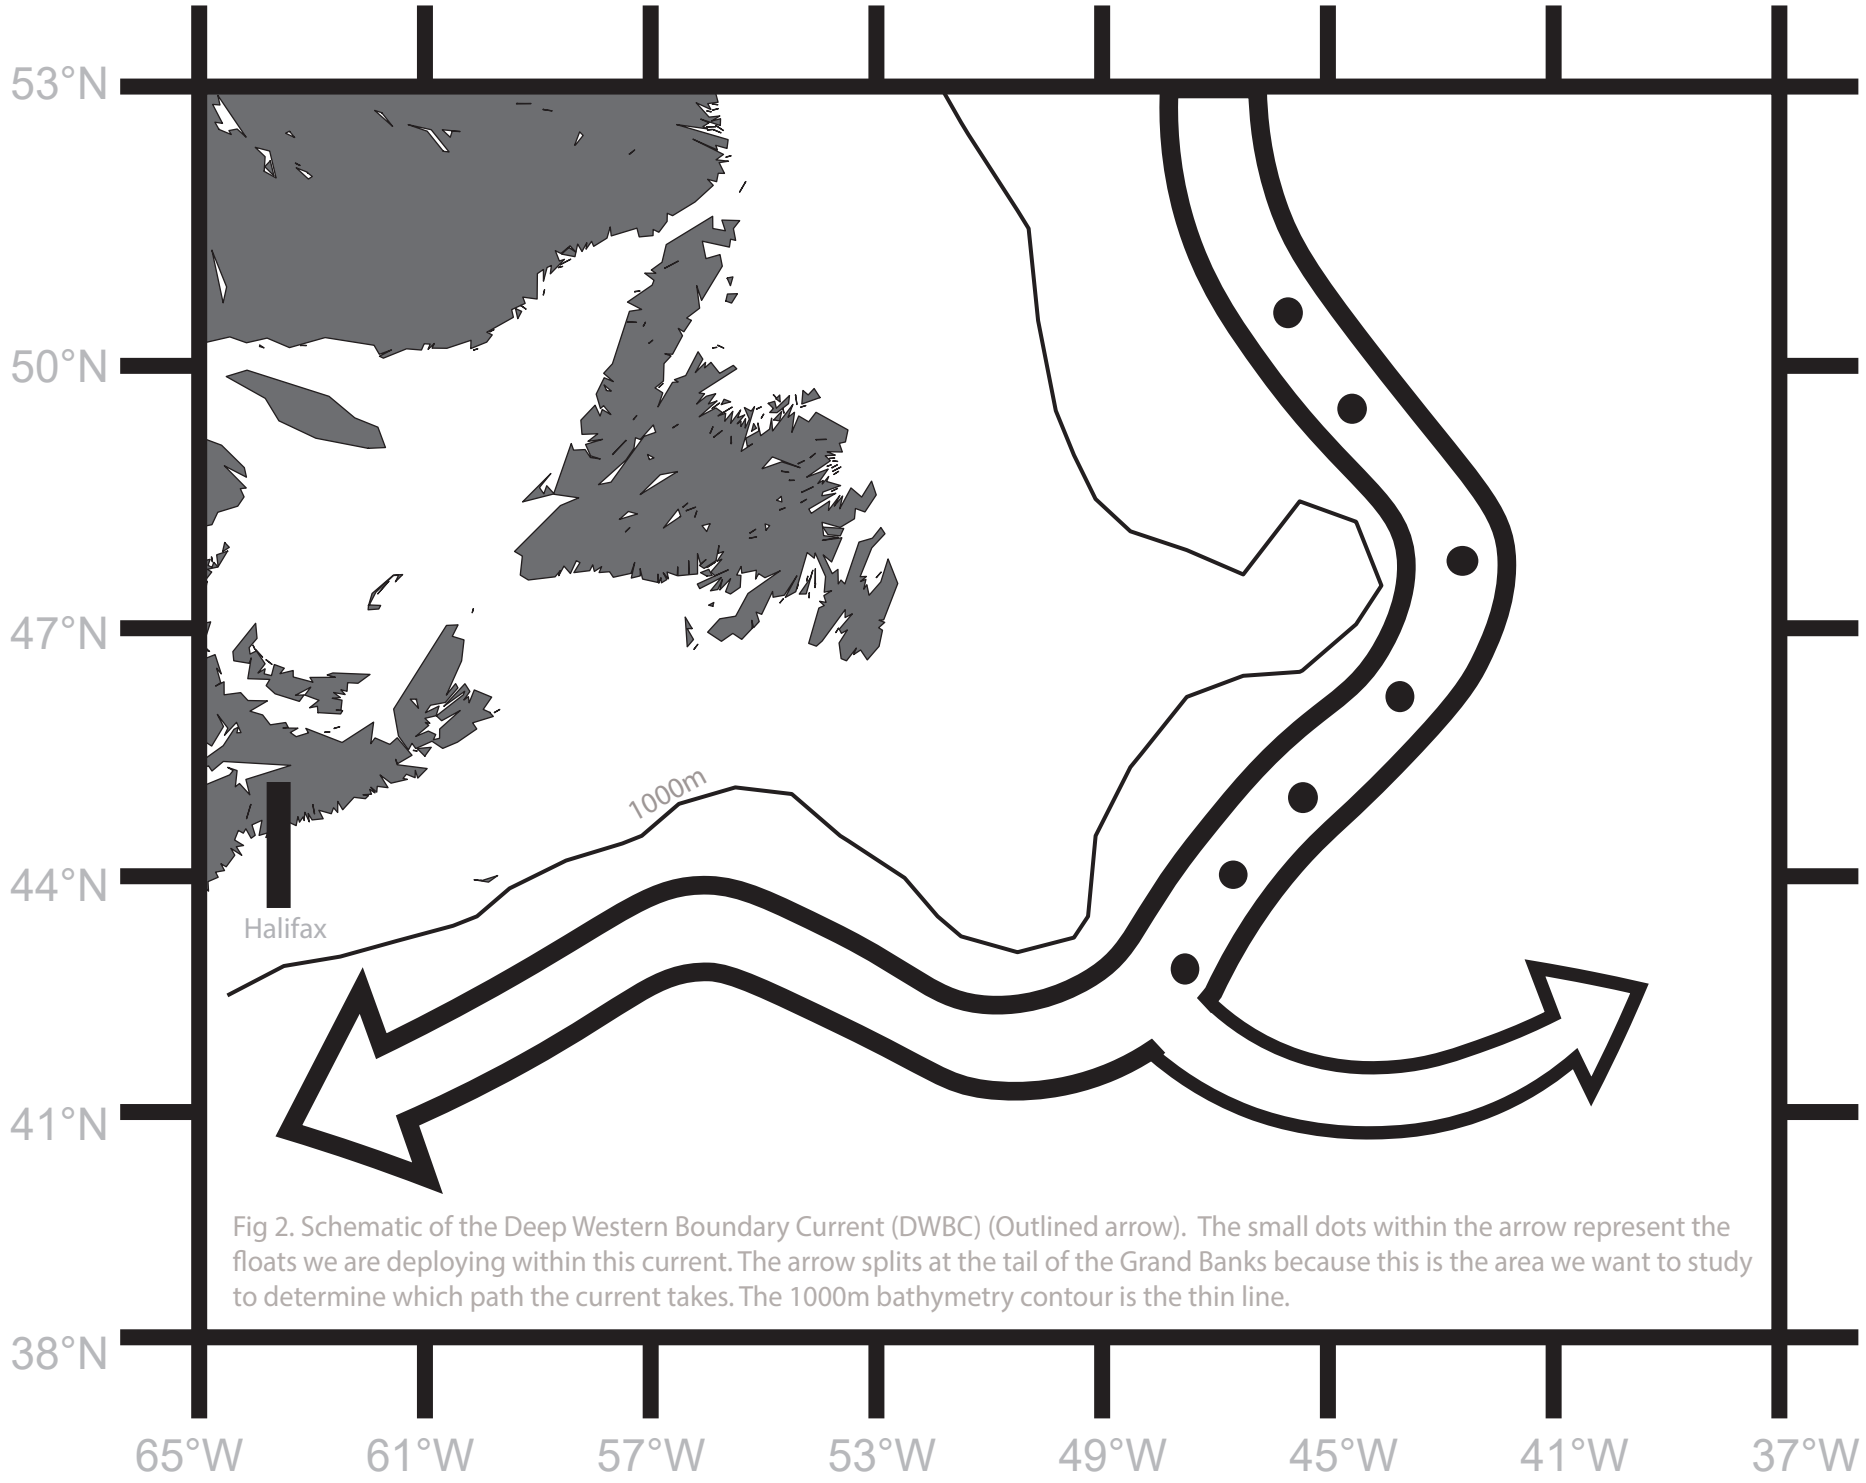

Fig 2. Schematic of the Deep Western Boundary Current (DWBC) (Outlined arrow). The small dots within the arrow represent the floats we are deploying within this current. The arrow splits at the tail of the Grand Banks because this is the area we want to study to determine which path the current takes. The 1000m bathymetry contour is the thin line.